Editorial Review

From School Library Journal

Adult/High School-For young adults getting their first jobs, moving into their own living quarters, or about to go off to college, this guidebook provides a basic look at what it takes to make it in today's world. Each chapter covers a major area in life skills without becoming a lecture or sounding like the proverbial parental talk. Beginning with social skills, the author also includes business, financial, consumer, and some legal information, such as the importance of reading and understanding contracts. Lists concerning the baseline needs of living independently include kitchen supplies and other basic household items. "How-tos," as in how to do laundry, keep a car running, plan meals, and buy supplies, round out the information. Each chapter can easily be read independently. Important points are repeated within boxes or set off with bullets. The type is large enough to encourage reading without seeming overwhelming and the use of white space provides just the right amount of delineation.

Review

The author, Director of Global Protocol and Etiquette Services, has created this great tool from her student workshop of the same name. It is everything it claims to be: a one-stop shop for practical and effective ways to make the most of this YA rite of passage. From helping readers determine when they are ready to fly the nest to the nuts and bolts of keeping a roof over your head, food on your plate and funds in your pocket, it goes on to cover everything else that will make young people feel confident and comfortable (think job skills, how much to tip and when, buying a car, doing laundry, nurturing yourself, and what to keep in the medicine cabinet). A great graduation gift. --KLIATT Codes: SA Recommended for senior high school students, advanced students, and adults. --KLIATT'S, July 2001

"This is it - the leaving home guide I wanted for my son (and myself)! Tina Pestalozzi has thoroughly researched the practical steps every young adult should complete before leaving the nest - organizing money matters, mastering business etiquette, renting a first apartment - while mapping a route to self-sufficiency and responsibility. I recommend it to my clients as essential reading for kids who want to be successfully independent (and for the parents who want to help them get there!)" --Kate Goggin, International Living Educator.
