Abe Connor hates liars. In his line of work as a bounty hunter, he's met a lot of them. He's been lied to by some of the best, but the bartender working at his friend's new club has to be one of the worst liars he's ever met. He knows that she is lying about her life. He should move on and find someone else, but he can't get the woman off his mind. She's a mystery that needs solving and he's just the man with the skills to do it — and he's up for the task.

Roxanne Stone has been on the run with her daughter for a really long time, moving place to place to escape a violent past. When her friend offers her a job with great pay and benefits at her new nightclub, she couldn't afford to turn it down. She is used to the riffraff at the shady bars where she had worked in the past, but what she isn't prepared for is the attraction to one hot bounty hunter who continually asks her personal questions that she can't answer.

As Abe grows closer to finding out the truth surrounding Roxanne, he inadvertently places her in danger from her past. Will he be able to protect her? Will she make a run for it and leave everything she worked so hard for behind? Will these two stubborn and suspicious people be able to overcome their distrust and allow their feelings for one another to grow into something more? Abe and Roxanne will find out that there is always a price to pay for Rising Bounty.
